UN Pledged to Take Over Control of Trieste

DECISIVE STEP FINALLY TAKEN BY DELEGATES

Internationalization Plan
Approved On Anniversary of UN Organization

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Jan. 11—The United Nations security council took the plunge today by assuming with brave hopes full responsibility for peace and security in the explosive region of internationalized Trieste.

The decisive step was taken by a vote of 10 to 0, with only Australia abstaining. The vote pledged the security council table to be guardians and monitors of what promises to develop into one of the most controversial sore spots in European history.

Both Italy and Yugoslavia have bitterly condemned the big four council of foreign ministers' design for the future of Trieste, the Italo-Yugoslav frontiers and the conduct of government in the disputed territory.

Italy Quiet Now
Indications are that the Italian government will be acquiescent for the present in knuckling down to treaty provisions, but will soon be busily engaged in campaigning for speedy revisions of the entire free territory statute.

The Yugoslavia government, vociferously against the council of foreign ministers, has shown no inclination to back down on its threats not to sign the Italian treaty unless radical revisions in Belgrade's favor are undertaken in the free territory border and port arrangements.

Year's Battle Over
Adoption by the security council of the big four's permanent statute and assumption of responsibility for the territory's integrity and independence ended nearly a year's battling from Moscow to Paris and finally New York.

The Paris conference of 21 nations last Summer gave its grudging consent to the instrument only after 11 weeks of unmitigated wrangling which infuriated the various delegates in the Soviet camp against those in the western camp. The free territory statute finally emerged as the keystone of the five Balkan treaties.

The stamp of approval to the international territory was given by the security council on the first anniversary yesterday of the United Nations organization. On Jan. 10, 1946, the inception of this 51-nation body took place in central hall in London.

DOG LICENSES DEADLINE ONLY ONE WEEK AWAY

Dog owners in Circleville and Pickaway county have only 7 more shopping days in which to procure a 1947 license tag for their canine. The new tags are on sale at the office of County Auditor Forrest Short in the courthouse, Circleville.

He said Saturday morning that 673 of the new license tags had been sold. Sales of the 1946 licenses totaled 3,003. After Jan. 20—which is the deadline fixed by the state law for buying the tags—$1 penalty will be added to the price for delinquency.

Cost of the dog licenses is the same as last year, namely $1 for males, $3 for females, and $1 for spayed females. Auditor Short pointed out that state law requires that a tag be bought for every dog over the age of 3 months.

As a convenience to dog owners, Auditor Short explained, applications for licenses may be made by mail and the license and tag will be mailed to the applicant. In all mailed applications the age, sex, color, and breed of the dog must accompany the remittance.

Ford Proposes Billion Dollar Ohio Road Plan

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 11—A four-point, ten-year, billion dollar program to bring Ohio's highway system "to an adequate condition for present-day use," was recommended today by Perry T. Ford, outgoing state highway director. Ford's four points provided:

- 1.—Additional funds for highway construction.
- 2.—Elimination of all lightly traveled routes from the state highway system.
- 3.—Removal of present statutory limitations as to allocation of construction projects, and,
- 4.—Improvement of the status of highway department personnel.

Ford said that a recently-completed inventory of the state highway system indicated it would require $1,292,000,000 to bring roads on the state system to an adequate condition.

Included was a study of expressways showing construction which is needed to give relief to the densely populated areas of the state.

Ford proposed that additional funds be acquired by allocating the one-cent per gallon liquid fuel tax for highway construction only. At present the liquid fuel tax goes to the general fund.

Further, Ford urged that an additional one-cent per gallon liquid fuel tax be added and made available for highway construction only.

As for elimination of part of the state highway system, Ford pointed out that 5,525 miles of roads on the state system carry less than 299 vehicles per day. These include 384 miles of paved roads, 4,998 miles of surfaced roads and 143 miles of unsurfaced roads.

Ford recommended that the major portions of this traffic (Continued on Page Two)

Samuel F. McComas, 31, truck driver, and Earl McGee, 40, contractor, both of Columbus, were in the Pickaway county jail, Saturday, awaiting a hearing before Justice of the Peace Harold O. Eveland. They were taken into custody Friday night on U. S. Route 23, south of Circleville, by Sheriff Charles Radloff and Deputy Carl Radloff, who charged McComas with driving when intoxicated, and McGee with intoxication.

Leroy Cox, operator of a hotel at Jackson, was fined $10 and costs, Friday night, by Justice Eveland, after Cox had been arrested on U. S. Route 23, north of Circleville, by Deputy Sheriff Vern L. Pontious, who charged the Jackson man with reckless driving. The deputy said Cox drove on the left side of the Norfolk and Western railroad underpass.

State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells made two traffic arrests Friday night. Charles McFerlin, Chillicothe, was charged with reckless driving.

Judge Charles A. Leach ruled on the fairgrounds aspect while a decision by Judge Cecil J. Randall dealt with the hospital and orphanage provisions.

Both jurists held the more recent liquor law does not supercede previously existing records, but adopts them.

Judge Leach ruled, however, that state liquor stores were not affected because of the principle of sovereignty of the state.

SCIENCE HAILS PROGRESS IN FIGHT ON POLIO

Isolation Of Virus May Lead
To Discovery Of Vaccine
Against Dread Disease

PALO ALTO, Cal., Jan. 11—A milestone in science's fight against infantile paralysis was marked today in announcement of the isolation of a nearly pure polio virus.

Two Stanford university chemists were credited with successfully isolating the virus in an experiment which may lead to discovery of a vaccine effective against certain types of the dread crippling disease.

The chemists, Dr. Hubert S. Loring and Dr. C. E. Schwerdt, have been working for the past three years under a grant from the national foundation for infantile paralysis.

Their experiments resulted in a virus which was declared eighty per cent pure.

A virus is a non-filterable organism of infinitesimal dimensions. The Stanford researchers found by means of photographs taken through an electron microscope that polio virus is a spherical particle about twenty-five billionths of a meter in diameter. It reacts chemically as a protein.

Doctor Loring pointed out that with the discovery of a relatively pure virus the "experimental door is open" to further research.

The chemist cautioned, however, that "a long and exacting experimental path lies ahead" in the search for a successful vaccine against polio.

It was explained that the virus must be rendered non-infectious and must be tested on rats, mice and monkeys before it can be safely applied in the final stage—human vaccination.

The Stanford experiment definitely established for the first time what the polio virus looks like, its size and its chemical properties.

The Stanford researchers reached success in the first stage of their experiment by removing the brains and spinal cords of polio infected rats. This substance, placed under sub-freezing temperature (Continued on Page Two)

SIMPLICITY WILL MARK HERBERT INAUGURATION

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 11—Simplicity will govern arrangements for the inauguration of Gov.-Elect Thomas J. Herbert Monday from his short 12-minute speech to his refusal to deck himself out in a silk hat.

It was indicated today that Herbert will use the Bible he read as a boy as he is administered the oath of office by Chief Justice Carl V. Weygant.

Afterward, the new governor will speak for only 12 minutes. The address will be made from the west steps of the statehouse unless bad weather forces the ceremonies into the rotunda of the capitol building.

Music will be furnished by the Ohio State University concert band, the Columbus Republican glee club and the Capital University chapel choir.

Bishop Michael J. Ready of the Columbus diocese will deliver the benediction prior to the ceremonies. Benediction will be pronounced by Dr. Oscar Thomas Olson, pastor of the Epworth-Euclid Methodist church in Cleveland. Herbert is a member of Dr. Olson's church.

SALES TAX RECEIPTS IN COUNTY $165,469 IN 1946

Sales of prepaid state sales tax receipts in Pickaway county totaled $165,469.14 during 1946, as compared with $107,997.05 in 1945, it was announced Saturday by State Treasurer Don H. Ebright. The figures show a gain of $57,472.09 or more than 53 per cent.

The state treasurer's announcement said that prepaid sales tax receipts in Pickaway county during the week ended Dec. 31, 1946, amounted to $6,646.43 as against a total of $2,729.67 for the corresponding week in 1945.

British Labor Cabinet Blasted By Supporters

By International News Service
The British labor government, victorious in every skirmish with its political opposition, came under damaging fire from its own supporters today in the defiant strike of thousands of truck drivers.

Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee's government chose to order out the troops to move thousands of tons of accumulated and spoiling foodstuffs rather than appease the strikers.

In consequence, for the first time since it came to power in the Summer of 1945, the taunt "blackleg" (strikebreaker) was hurled against the labor cabinet.

More serious even than the slur on its union policy was the effort of leaders of the unauthorized strike to convert it into a general walkout.

It was reported that the dockworkers on the southern docks from London to Bristol had pledged not to unload food ships if the cargoes are scheduled for transport in army-manned trucks.

Meanwhile, thousands of housewives began forming in line before food stores before daybreak in hopes of buying something for the family's Sunday dinner.

In Italy, bombs packed with leaflets warning of imminent Jewish underground attacks on the British army exploded in Rome, Turin, Milan, Venice and Bari.

The leaflets were purportedly signed by the Irgun Zvei Leumi. Sir Victor Cavendish-Bentinck, Britain's ambassador to Poland, was summoned back to London today. The ostensible reason was that he would report on the forthcoming policy elections. But also believed involved were Polish charges, brought out yesterday in the treason trial of three men and a woman, that he received state and military secrets.

British Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, concluding a good-will visit to Moscow where he conferred with Premier Stalin, prepared to fly back to London.

The chief of the British imperial staff will carry back an overcoat of a Red army general which is lined with sable and valued at $8,000.

FEWER STRIKES PREDICTED FOR PRESENT YEAR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11—A labor department survey disclosed today that 35 industry-wide strikes accounted for nearly three-fourths of the idleness caused by labor-management disputes in 1946.

The statistics were accompanied by the observation that the nation may expect "a substantial drop" in the number of such large-scale controversies in the year ahead.

Bureau of labor statistics experts based their optimism on an analysis of the industrial disputes pattern of 1919-20. Twenty per cent of the country's workers were involved in strikes in 1919, but the following year the figure was only seven per cent.

The labor department review of last year's turbulent labor-management scene showed 4,700 strikes involving 4,465,000 workers and costing 113,000,000 man-days of idleness. About 15 per cent of the nation's workers were involved in strikes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11—Republican leaders in congress threatened today to trim President Truman's budget for the 1948 fiscal year and go ahead with their program for a tax reduction.

They announced their intentions of cutting at least three or four billions from the total expenditures recommended by Mr. Truman.

Sen. Taft (R) Ohio, and other GOP chiefs have argued that income taxes should be slashed as much as 20 percent.

In his budget message, Mr. Truman declared:

"As long as business, employment and national income continue high, we should maintain tax revenues at levels that will not only meet current expenditures but also leave a surplus for retirement of the public debt. There is no justification now for tax reduction."

Chairman Bridges (R) N. H., of the senate appropriations committee and Chairman Taber (R) N. Y., of the house appropriations committee led the Republican criticism of the proposed budget.

Bridges described the President's budget as "a cold shock to the American taxpayer's public." He accused Mr. Truman of proposing "high wartime levels of taxation and expenditures and a pitifully small reduction of our depressing national debt."

Taber announced that he would attempt to have the budget cut to 29 billion dollars. He labeled the President's budget "excessive" and "highly confusing."

Most of the Democrats praised the President's "hardboiled" budget and assured him of their support in both houses in the coming battles over appropriations.

COFALL TO BE LIQUOR BOSS UNDER HERBERT

COLUMBUS, Jan. 11—Governor-Elect Thomas J. Herbert completed the selection of his cabinet today with the appointment of Stanley B. Cofall, 52, Cleveland, to be liquor director after Herbert takes office Monday.

The colorful Cofall, president of the National Solvent Corporation of Cleveland and football captain at Notre Dame University in 1916, will succeed Supreme Court Judge Robert M. Sohngen. He will receive $6,500 a year.

Cofall, active in Masonic circles, probably is the outstanding Protestant alumnus of Notre Dame in Ohio. A former professional football player and coach, he maintains his interest in athletics, and until his resignation yesterday, was chairman of the Cleveland boxing commission.

He was a schoolmate of Herbert at Cleveland East high school, and played halfback on the Knute Rockne Notre Dame teams of 1914, 1915, and 1916, being captain the last year. He received his law degree from Notre Dame in 1917, and immediately enlisted as a private in World War I.

OHIO FUEL GAS COMPANY PICKUP TRUCK IS STOLEN

Theft of a 1941 model pickup truck owned by the Ohio Fuel Gas company was reported to police Saturday.

The report said the yellow and black vehicle carrying the lettering of the company's name disappeared at 12:30 a. m. Saturday from its parking place in front of the home of Frank Marion, 307 East Franklin street, gas company service man. The keys had been left in the truck. Less than one hour later, at 1:15 a. m., the police report said, the stolen truck was driven into the Crites filling station on South Court street, and the driver, an elderly man, purchased gasoline.

LEWIS PRESENTS APPEAL ON FINE

Umw Charges Federal Judge
With Nine Errors In Imposing Fines

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11—John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers today asked the supreme court to reverse their contempt conviction in the coal walk-out on the grounds that the decision ignored the Norris-LaGuardia act and imposed excessive punishment.

A brief filed with the supreme court by the UMW cited nine specific legal errors by Federal District Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, who imposed a fine of $3,510,000 on Lewis and the UMW last Dec. 3.

The union declared that Judge Goldsborough "disregarded completely the plain, unequivocal language" of the Norris-LaGuardia statute which prohibits the issuance of injunctions by federal courts in labor disputes.

The union asserted that the action of the lower court reluctantly compelled "the suggestion that public hysteria and political expediency, rather than the dispassionate and judicial application of established legal principles, have thus far dominated and determined these proceedings."

Both the union and the justice department filed briefs today in preparation for oral arguments before the supreme court next Tuesday.

The government's brief took the position that the Norris-LaGuardia act did not apply in the case in view of the Smith-Connally law labor disputes act, a later law of congress.

Even should the supreme court hold that the Norris-LaGuardia act did not apply, the government contended that Judge Goldsborough "nevertheless was properly exercising judicial power when the restraining order was issued."

VETS ASSURED OF PRIORITY ON HOMES STARTED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—The government assured veterans today that they still have first choice on buying or renting the 700,000 permanent dwellings started under the now-defunct veterans priority system.

The office of temporary controls pointed out that maximum sales prices and rentals set on those homes by the federal housing administration also still apply, despite recent changes in housing regulations.

The old regulations apply to all units started under authorizations granted before Dec. 24.

On that date the veterans priority system was changed to a general permit system, under which non-veterans are permitted to build for their own use. The $10,000 price ceiling on new homes was also removed and rent ceilings were relaxed.

The OTC said that it is conducting an enforcement drive through its 650 rent offices to see that veterans preference rights are observed and that ceilings are enforced.

OHIO FUEL GAS COMPANY PICKUP TRUCK IS STOLEN

Theft of a 1941 model pickup truck owned by the Ohio Fuel Gas company was reported to police Saturday.

The report said the yellow and black vehicle carrying the lettering of the company's name disappeared at 12:30 a. m. Saturday from its parking place in front of the home of Frank Marion, 307 East Franklin street, gas company service man. The keys had been left in the truck. Less than one hour later, at 1:15 a. m., the police report said, the stolen truck was driven into the Crites filling station on South Court street, and the driver, an elderly man, purchased gasoline.

revise the Wagner act on a basis of "sound moderation."

The senate labor committee member's action was his answer to the introduction of legislation by Sen. Ball (R) Minn. to ban industry-wide collective bargaining.

The drive for stringent labor legislation also moved ahead in the house with Rep. Hoffman (R) Mich. calling for outright repeal of the Wagner act. Hoffman offered an eight-point substitute measure.

Ball's bill, third in a series of labor measures under his name, faced stormy opposition from labor leaders and pro-labor senators.

Sen. Pepper (D) Fla., a labor committee colleague of Morse and Ball, charged that the Minnesota member's latest measure would in effect "destroy" international labor unions.

As explained by Ball, his ban against industry-wide bargaining would hit hardest against the United Mine workers headed by John L. Lewis. It exempts the Railroad Brotherhoods and would permit "company-wide" bargaining in the steel and auto industries.

Morse said he expected to have his bill ready for introduction and committee consideration within the next fortnight. The labor committee headed by Sen. Taft (R) Ohio plans to open hearings on the Ball-Taft-Smith version of the 1946 Case bill next week.

ASHVILLE

Circle Two of the WSCS will meet at the home of Mrs. Harry Sark Monday. Mrs. Walter Harris and Mrs. Ben Morrison are assistant hostesses.

Ashville high will be host to the fast Grove City basketball team Tuesday evening in a game which should be one of the best of the year played on the local floor.

The cost of the Daily Herald increases by 5c a week in Ashville beginning Monday.

Kaye Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Escar Miller, is confined to her home with a heart ailment. Kaye is a member of the Ashville fifth grade.

Dick Hedges attended the Elks initiation in Circleville Tuesday evening when his son, Dr. J. M. Hedges, became a member of the order.

Dick Hudson, former stellar Ashville high athlete, made the traveling junior varsity basketball team at Ohio State University and will make all road trips with the team. The team plays the preliminary game to the Ohio State University game at Champaign, Ill., on Monday.

Mrs. Naomi Hearn, Commiskey, Indiana, who is visiting Mrs. Ida McManus, was the winner in the first Merchants' Appreciation Night at Ashville Thursday evening.

heard criticism of Ohio's highway system is the lack of continuity of improvement or so-called "spotty" improvement of various routes.

The retiring highway director explained that the department has discretionary choice as to location of construction projects for only that point represented by 35 per cent of 67-1/2 per cent of 1.5 cents per gallon of liquid fuel tax. A total state tax of 5-1/2 cents per gallon is levied.

"More latitude in allocation of the expenditure of highway improvement funds," said Ford, "would permit projects of sufficient length to be constructed so as to obviate a lack of continuity of individual improvements but with an end result of an equitable distribution of funds throughout a long-range program."

It is therefore recommended, Ford declared, "that such statutory limitations be removed."

Gen. Bradley asserted that the United States was in world affairs "to stay."

If in future research, a vaccine is developed, it will not be the first such substance proposed in the fight against the crippling of children. Scientists said that during the past decade, several polio vaccines have been offered, but have been quickly discarded as too dangerous or erratic for practical application on humans.

CHICAGO, Jan. 11—A Cook county physician today lauded the isolation of a nearly pure poliovirus by Stanford University scientists as a "discovery comparable to the production of the atom bomb."

Dr. Edward Piszczek, Cook county health physician, added: "Its perfection will be one of the greatest miracles of the age."

Dr. Piszczek, himself an expert on infantile paralysis, said the Stanford discovery was "the opening wedge toward procuring a vaccine with which to prevent and cure the scourge."

JAYCEES BACK ENROLLMENT IN HOSPITAL PLAN

Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce has completed arrangements with Central Hospital Service, Columbus, to sponsor a community-wide enrollment in the Blue Cross plan of prepaid hospital care, according to information received from Ralph W. Jordan, executive director of the plan.

A committee comprising James L. Yost, chairman, Paul Rodenfels, Paul Warden, Robert Elisea and L. E. Williams is cooperating with representatives from Central Hospital Service to further the movement. Enrollments will be received by Blue Cross field representatives who will be in the county engineers office of the court house to answer questions and take applications. The enrollment starts Wednesday, January 15 and runs through Saturday, January 18.

According to Mr. Jordan, Blue Cross group hospital service is available to all employed persons. There are two classifications of eligibility under the group plan: (1)—any person employed in a group of five or more enrolls in an employer sponsored group; (2)—a self-employed person, or one employed where there are less than five employees enrolled in the community group. "Blue Cross is nationwide," states Jordan. "More than 24,000,000 persons in the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico now have their hospital bills in case of sickness or accidental injury, paid by Blue Cross. Every sixth person in the United States and Puerto Rico is a Blue Cross member," he avers.

"Blue Cross is a voluntary, non-profit plan designed to provide low cost, prepaid hospital care for all employed persons and their families. It is the fastest growing plan today," he asserts and cites that, "more than 27,000 enrollments daily are received by the 87 Blue Cross plans in this country."

Blighted Life

Blighted trees may be compared with blighted lives. When the blight strikes, its object withers. Blight is a disease. In human lives, from the standpoint of the spiritual side, it is sin. Sin and separation from the Holy Spirit, has withered millions of lives of our generation. Down through the ages, it has cursed human life.

A life without religion is like a ship without a rudder. It moves aimlessly, gets nowhere and accomplishes nothing constructive. But take that same life, lead it into the church, nurture it with the guidance of God's word and the faith in His plan and that same life can accomplish literally the impossible.

A blighted forest is a dismal sight. A blighted life—just one—is more distressing than all of the withered trees of a once beautiful forest. There is one important difference between a blighted tree and a blighted soul. The tree, nor its owner can do anything to change the condition. The person with a blighted life, needs but to seek God, ask His forgiveness and trust faithfully in Him.

The churches of this community stand ready to give a helping hand to the blighted lives, to the hungry soul. The ministers of every denomination stand as representatives of God's church, willing, even eager, to set the feet of drifters back onto the Way of Life again.

Children raised in the influence of the Church and Sunday Schools have a better opportunity of avoiding blighted lives than those whose actions have never been tempered with the power of God's Love. Go to your church on Sunday. Help save the world from blight.

The Authority of Jesus

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 12 is John 2, the Memory Verse being Matthew 5:12, "Rejoice and be exceeding glad.")

"AND THE third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there: And Jesus was called, and His disciples, to the marriage."

The third day after what? Probably after the final occurrence in our last lesson, the talk with Nathanael. In the record we have of the years Jesus was on earth, there are few references to His mother; none to her being present at any social gathering of which He was a part. In fact, this writer does not recall at the moment any other festive gathering in the nature of a party, that Jesus Himself attended. He gathered with His friends in their homes, but that was all.

Jewish marriage feasts lasted several days and were very merry occasions. In this case Jesus' mother came to Him and said "They have no wine."

Jesus' answer, as translated, seems very harsh, almost rude: "Woman, what have I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come." The Greek word for woman, however, was not disrespectful, but quite the contrary. The words, "what have I to do with thee?" may have been a reproach, but a mild one. Jesus had now left home and "was about His Father's business."

Mary seems not to have been hurt at His remark, because she turned to the servants and said, "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it."

Jesus' First Miracle
Jesus saw six waterpots of stone, and said to the servants, "Fill the waterpots with water." They were filled, and He said, "Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast." They did so, and when this person tasted the "water," beheld it was wine—and good wine.

"When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was (but the servants which drew the water knew); the governor of the feast called the bridegroom."

He said, "Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now."

This was the first miracle recorded, and it was done with the utmost quiet, without any of the wonder and awe which His miracles usually invoked. The first who tasted the wine, the "ruler of the feast" did not know he was drinking a beverage which was miraculously produced.

After the marriage, Jesus, His mother, His brethren and disciples, went to Capernaum, where they tarried a few days. Then Jesus went to Jerusalem for the Passover. Going to the temple He found there the "court of the Gentiles" which was an extensive court outside the sanctuary proper, where Gentiles were allowed, was filled with a crowd changing money, bargaining, shouting at each other, some doubtless cheating.

There were doves in wicker cages, oxen, sheep, the babbles of many languages, sounds that were strange in a holy place. A righteous rage seized Jesus and, making a "scourge of small cords," he drove the motley crowd out of the temple, also the sheep and oxen, and "poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables."

"Take these things hence," he ordered; "make not My Father's house an house of merchandizing." His anger made the disciples remember that it was written in the scripture, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up."

No Protest
No one seems to have made protest or tried to prevent Jesus' actions, only some answered Him, saying, "What sign shewest Thou unto us, seeing that Thou doest these things?"

"Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up."

"Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt Thou rear it up in three days?"

"But He spake of the temple of His body."

"When therefore He was risen from the dead, His disciples remembered that He had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said."

How could Jesus "get away" as we say today, with this interference with the regular customs in this part of the temple? He was in the right, for one thing, and filled with righteous anger. He must have looked majestic, as "one having authority," and they were too awed to do anything but protest mildly.

During the period that Jesus was in Jerusalem, many believed in His name, when they saw the miracles He did, but "Jesus did not commit Himself unto them, because He knew all men." Perhaps He did not believe that these people, excited by the miracles, were real believers and would remain true to Him.

He "needed not that any should testify of man: for He knew what was in man."

THE CHURCH IN ACTION' SERMON TOPIC SUNDAY

Worshippers attending the services of the First Evangelical United Brethren church, East Main street, Sunday, with the pastor delivering an evangelistic sermon from the general theme, "The Church in Action." As the first message of the series on this general theme, the Sunday morning sermon topic is, "The Closed and Open Door." A scriptural directive may be found in St. Matthew 6:6.

"Allegretto" by Dvorak, "Barcarolle" by Bendel and "Marche Heroique" by Saint-Saens are the organ selections chosen by Miss Lucille Kirkwood. The choir under the direction of Charles Kirkpatrick will sing the anthem, "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem," by J. H. Maunier with Clarence Radcliffe singing the baritone solo.

The junior church will enjoy a juvenile lesson study in charge of Mrs. Carl L. Wilson. Elaine Woodward will read the scripture. Tommy and Delores Jean Valentine will play the piano duet offertory. Ronald Hawkes will sing the pre-lesson vocal solo.

At 6 o'clock in the Sunday school room, Wanda Young will lead the Youth Fellowship lesson discussion.

The evening worship will begin at 7:30 o'clock with an old fashioned song service. The sermon subject will be developed from the scripture text recorded in Proverbs 22:28 with the topic, "Ancient Landmarks."

In extending an invitation to those who do not worship elsewhere, the Rev. Mr. Wilson says, "A warm welcome is awaiting you at the First Evangelical United Brethren church, where somebody speaks to you first."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11—The fresh Republicans and reorganizing Democrats held hands—rhetorically—over Mr. Truman's message. Mr. Truman said the power of the future "lies in our hands—yours and mine, joined together." While Republican directors were coy generally, house majority leader Halleck responded: "I think that Sam Rayburn on his side and I upon my side join in expressing to the President our firm intention of co-operating for the welfare of our beloved country." The romance movement proceeded so far a well advised administration publicist radioed a whole speech about what a wonderful thing it would be if the two parties worked together. This was the theme the White House projected for the opening of the new Republican congress.

Now no official of either party here is a Scrooge and no one is against cooperation, but the actualities of the inner situation are simply these:

Mr. Truman laid down a union-reform program which would not come close to handling the national abuses. His first point proposed barring jurisdictional strikes—apparently just barring them by legislation. Hardly anyone is against that, but it does not touch many unions, or a wide field, or have anything whatever to do with the important issues, which is the ability of so many unions to make an entire nation suffer and decline by cutting off coal in midwinter, electricity, food, transportation. On the big question Mr. Truman said he did not know how to stop strikes. He proposed to stop the little ones directly by legislative banning, but concerning the big ones, he proposed another labor-management problems investigation by congress.

The President did have the ideal that both sides in the big cases should be prevented from using economic force (meaning tying up the country apparently) but he did not suggest how. On this investigation recommendation congress will not do as he wishes, the prevailing opinion being that nearly everyone has studied the cause of strikes and union difficulties too long already.

Only other trouble-shooting suggestion was to outlaw the secondary boycott in "unjust cases" only—to stop such things as a truck strike to help a coal strike, or a service strike to help a truck strike, although perhaps this definition goes further than the president would go, as he did not define particularly what he meant.

The other proposals to make unions happy by health, welfare, housing and other indirect legislation is in general agreeable to all, although there will be some trouble about social security.

But the inspirational underlying point of all this is Mr. Truman is considered a unions' president. A year ago he did not want this much, if any reform legislation. He (if not the unions) is prepared since election to go this far. But the Republicans want to go much further, nearly all of them. Primarily I think they are bent on setting up a government arbitration and conciliation system to adjudicate strike difficulties in the largest public utility industries, with the provisions that no strike can be called until adjudication measures have been tried fully, delaying strike calls 60 days or perhaps more.

GREEN LIGHT

THE New Year brought a greater than ever crops of business forecasts. In general, optimism is somewhat restrained, but it is there. This time last year order books were bulging. People wanted new cars, new furnaces, new kitchen sinks, new washing machines. Builders had long lists of clients who were impatient to get that dream house started, replete with every conceivable new-era gadget. But factories and retailers began to realize much of this ordering was in duplicate, triplicate. And there developed a definite customer cooling off. All this made 1946 look like a year of prosperity, but not of prosperity plus.

One of the dams that jammed production last year, governmental control, is out. Offsetting this advantage however is the uncertainty regarding labor. Will the unions, in portal-to-portal pay suits and in straight wage hike demands, price labor out of the employer's reach? Most of the prophets seem to think compromise will avert this stalemate and give labor a modest boost that industry can absorb.

Though certain fields will have their surpluses, such as textiles possibly, due to false orders and a buyer's resistance attitude, these kinks are likely to be smoothed out by mid-year. All in all if everybody goes to work, and stays steadily at the job, it looks as if Uncle Sam might get his economy righted before 1947 goes out.

The little schooners, their sails looming against the horizon, are out again in the gulf after their cargoes of bivalves. The war kept most of them moored to home wharves. But now they are busily working for those discriminating gastronomes who live for the months with R's in their names, when oysters are said to be at their best.

Is there anything quite so good on a cold night—or a warm one, either—as fried oysters, plump, lightly cooked and golden brown in their bread crumbed jackets? Or do you prefer them rolled in cracker crumbs at your house?

Or a big old-fashioned tureenful of hot oyster stew, with little yellow dabs of melting butter and a dash of paprika floating on the top, the milk rich and lightly salted and the oysters with their edges barely curled? And mounds of small round oyster crackers on the side? What more could mortal desire?

Quiet Atmosphere Important In the Treatment of Asthma

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
WHILE we have no very new or miraculous weapons against asthma, there are a good many tried and true measures which can be used with great benefit to the patient.
An attack of asthma is characterized by shortness of breath, a great deal of coughing and the bringing up of thick material from the lungs. Usually such attacks are mild and can readily be treated by the doctor with the patient at home.
In some instances, however, the disease occurs in a more serious form. In such cases, according to Dr. Haddon M. Carrier and his co-workers of the Mayo Clinic, the patient is best treated in the hospital and, preferably, in a private room.
Nervous Factors Important
This is necessary for several reasons. First, nervous factors are often important in making asthma worse. Patients who are panic-stricken because of the shortness of breath and are in an atmosphere of anxiety caused by family and friends, often respond favorably to new surroundings. Frequently this restores their confidence and hope.
Second, the quiet hospital surroundings and prompt administration of the proper remedies as soon as they are needed help the

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE
By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

LEARN FROM DUPLICATE
SOME of the most successful rubber bridge players have developed important phases of their well-rounded game through lessons learned in duplicate tournaments. One of the most fundamental is that it seldom plays to let the other fellows play a contract of one in a suit, especially when a single suit has been bid by one opponent and then passed by his partner. If the next player, whose pass would close the bidding, has a hand of close to average strength, with fair length in one or two other suits, it usually will pay him to keep it open with a double. This gives his partner the option between a business pass and a minimum call of No Trumps or any other suit.
3. Pass 1 Pass 2 Pass 2 Pass 2 Pass 2 Pass
Under No. 1 sequence is the bidding that actually occurred on this rubber deal. West made his contract on the head, losing three tricks in diamonds and one each in the other suits. South's pass of the 1-Spade was very bad bridge. No duplicate player of acumen would ever have done that, as he knows the value of chiseling for possible margins. The same principle applies, with variations, however, to fine rubber bridge, in which a long series of slight gains means the difference between a winning and losing player.
This South's reason for not doubling was that he was vulnerable. In this case, though, that fact should have been an extra reason for doubling. It increased the chance that North had fairly substantial cards, since a vulnerable North would have required more to overcall at the range of two than a not-vulnerable one. If South had doubled, you can see that he would have profited, either through North bidding and making 2-Clubs or by setting West if he went to 2-Spades.

Your Week-End Question
What should a player have in his own hand, in addition to its aces and kings, to justify his making a Blackwood or Culbertson convention bid of 4-No Trumps?
South's reason for not doubling was that he was vulnerable. In this case, though, that fact should have been an extra reason for doubling. It increased the chance that North had fairly substantial cards, since a vulnerable North would have required more to overcall at the range of two than a not-vulnerable one. CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE
NOT THAT I love thee, dear, the less, but that I hate thee more. Anne woke from a troubled dream with the words going round and round in her head. She looked across at the other bed and could just make out Philip's profile against the faint light that came in the window. What had she been dreaming about him? It couldn't have been a happy dream. Not that I love thee, dear, the less, but that I hate thee more. Good Heavens! Anne sat up in bed, shivered in the early morning air and lay down again. She didn't hate Philip. She loved him. You couldn't hate a person and love him at the same time, could you? Come to think of it, that was just what the psychologists said you did. They even had a fancy name for it. She didn't believe it, though—or did she? She saw herself and Philip facing each other before he had slammed out of the house. What had been in his eyes? What had been in hers?
She had been awake a long time in the night with that memory; thinking about it all day hadn't been enough. But she felt quieter now, more detached, so that she could look around the quarrel instead of just going through it over and over. All her emotions these past months seemed to focus themselves into one central conflict—she had given Philip all she had; and he had not, in turn, given her all he had. She had wished to take back her gifts, she had wished to belong to herself again, and she could not. She loved him because she could not help it; and because she could not help loving him, there was this strange underlying hatred, this outraged pride.
And some of this same bitterness had entered into her feeling for Mary. She had imagined to herself that Mary was hers, that she would be the mother of Mary that Sheila had not wanted to be; and Sheila's coming had stripped that illusion from her, too.
But that didn't matter now, she thought. She had never been jealous of Philip's affection for Mary; her feeling was really a transferred one to Mary of her jealousy of Sheila, and a refusal to admit to herself how much she had lost, or rather, how much she had never had.
She had accused Philip of wanting her only to make a home for him and Mary, and perhaps in a way that was true; but did he mean so little by that? She knew he didn't. His protest against her refusal to accept responsibility for Mary was surely the last thing that should have angered her, because it showed how much he did want.
But of course it wasn't anything he had said. It was funny how things you thought successfully repressed would come suddenly to the surface in a moment when you were caught off guard, and all your determination to be reasonable, all your efforts at self-control, went up in smoke.
She had been all over it in the long hours before she had fallen into a restless, tormented sleep. Philip had come home at the usual time, they had said little to each other, encouraging Mary to talk instead. After dinner Philip played cards with Mary until bedtime. When Anne came back downstairs, Philip was deep in the paper and did not even look up. She wanted to say something, but she could not say she hadn't meant it. And what was there for him to say? They could keep on ignoring it, and sooner or later they would have another quarrel. . . .
Her mind stopped there. It couldn't be like that. Their marriage couldn't degenerate into such a thing. She'd rather break it off now. . . . She'd rather, . . .
Philip's face on the pillow was emerging more clearly in the morning light. Watching it, Anne knew she could never leave him. Whatever his reasons had been for wanting to marry her, he HAD wanted to. They HAD been happy. Surely they could again.
The light was beginning to bother her and she turned over. If he had wanted to go back to Sheila, she would have given him up, but she knew he didn't; she knew that whatever hold Sheila had on him, he wanted to break. Anne closed her eyes. If this was her own fault, or at least hers as much as anybody's, then maybe. . . . She fell again into a light, restless sleep.
Philip awakened some time later to the dreary realization that it was Sunday. He looked over at Anne's bed and saw that it was empty. She was down getting breakfast, of course, and Mary would be up, and they would continue the pretense that nothing had happened—and the pretense would gradually become easier, he supposed. The trouble was, women used to dramatize such things, to extract the full flavor of unpleasantness. That wasn't fair, of course. But he didn't feel like being fair. He felt as though he were trapped, and the fact that he had sprung the thing himself didn't help. He heard the telephone and rolled over on his elbow to answer it. Maybe it was an emergency call; he hoped so.
But it was the wrong number. . . . "Awfully sorry." Well, they ought to be, dialing the wrong number at this hour on Sunday morning. He looked at his watch; it was nine o'clock.
Anne was reading Mary the funnies when he walked into the kitchen half an hour later. She looked up with a brief smile and went on reading. Philip sat down at the table and put some bread in the toaster. He drank his orange juice and looked at the front page of the paper while he waited, but he could not concentrate very well. Anne's voice ceased suddenly.
"Here are the rest," Mary's voice said.
"You get Philip to read them to you after breakfast."
"Will you, Philip?"
"Sure."
Mary slipped down and went out into the back yard where they heard her calling Micky. The toast popped up and Philip buttered it while Anne poured his coffee and refilled her own cup.
"Telephone wake you?"
"No. I was awake. Wrong number."
"Maddening. Have you any appointments today?"

He (if not the unions) is prepared since election to go this far. But the Republicans want to go much further, nearly all of them. Primarily I think they are bent on setting up a government arbitration and conciliation system to adjudicate strike difficulties in the largest public utility industries, with the provisions that no strike can be called until adjudication measures have been tried fully, delaying strike calls 60 days or perhaps more.

Quiet Atmosphere Important In the Treatment of Asthma

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WHILE we have no very new or miraculous weapons against asthma, there are a good many tried and true measures which can be used with great benefit to the patient.

An attack of asthma is characterized by shortness of breath, a great deal of coughing and the bringing up of thick material from the lungs. Usually such attacks are mild and can readily be treated by the doctor with the patient at home.

In some instances, however, the disease occurs in a more serious form. In such cases, according to Dr. Haddon M. Carrier and his co-workers of the Mayo Clinic, the patient is best treated in the hospital and, preferably, in a private room.

Nervous Factors Important
This is necessary for several reasons. First, nervous factors are often important in making asthma worse. Patients who are panicky-stricken because of the shortness of breath and are in an atmosphere of anxiety caused by family and friends, often respond favorably to new surroundings. Frequently this restores their confidence and hope.

Second, the quiet hospital surroundings and prompt administration of the proper remedies as soon as they are needed help the nervous sufferer from asthma to react favorably.

Third, hospital rooms can be cleared of rugs, drapes, and furniture and there are no animals with offending danders. The patient with asthma is often sensitive to these things.

Pillows and Mattress

Before the patient is brought to the hospital feather pillows and the mattress can be made dust-proof with special covers. If it is not possible to put the patient with severe asthma into a hospital, an attempt should be made to make his home surroundings like those of a hospital room.

In the treatment of the attack, the breathing in of oxygen or an oxygen-helium mixture helps to relieve the shortness of breath. The mixture may be administered through a mask. An oxygen tent is not necessary.

One drug which is most helpful in relieving the attack is epinephrine. It is given by injection under the skin. As the patient improves, the epinephrine may be employed as a spray into the mouth. Another drug which is helpful is aminophylline. It is given by injection into a vein.

While these things do not cure the asthmatic patient, they may serve to tide him over a severe attack.

"The Authority on Authorities"

LEARN FROM DUPLICATE

SOME of the most successful rubber bridge players have developed important phases of their well-rounded game through lessons learned in duplicate tournaments. One of the most fundamental is that it seldom plays to let the other fellows play a contract of one in a suit, especially when a single suit has been bid by one opponent and then passed by his partner. If the next player, whose pass would close the bidding, has a hand of close to average strength, with fair length in one or two other suits, it usually will pay him to keep it open with a double. This gives his partner the option between a business pass and a minimum call of No Trumps or any other suit.

3. Pass 1♠ Pass Pass
Dbl Pass 2♣ Pass

Under No. 1 sequence is the bidding that actually occurred on this rubber deal. West made his contract on the head, losing three tricks in diamonds and one each in the other suits. South's pass of the 1-Spade was very bad bridge.

No duplicate player of acumen would ever have done that, as he knows the value of chiseling for possible margins. The same principles apply, with variations, however, to fine rubber bridge, in which a long series of slight gains means the difference between a winning and losing player.

This South's reason for not doubling was that he was vulnerable. In this case, though, that fact should have been an extra reason for doubling. It increased the chance that North had fairly substantial cards, since a vulnerable North would have required more to overcall at the range of two than a not-vulnerable one. If South had doubled, you can see that he would have profited, either through North bidding and making 2-Clubs or by setting West if he went to 2-Spades.

Your Week-End Question

What should a player have in his own hand, in addition to his aces and kings, to justify his making a Blackwood or Culbertson convention bid of 4-No Trumps?

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE
NOT THAT I love thee, dear, the less, but that I hate thee more. Anne woke from a troubled dream with the words going round and round in her head. She looked across at the other bed and could just make out Philip's profile against the faint light that came in the window. What had she been dreaming about him? It couldn't have been a happy dream. Not that I love thee, dear, the less, but that I HATE thee more. Good Heaven! Anne sat up in bed, shivering in the early morning air and lay down again. She didn't hate Philip. She loved him. You couldn't hate a person and love him at the same time, could you? Come to think of it, that was just what the psychologists said you did. They even had a fancy name for it. She didn't believe it, though—or did she? She saw herself and Philip facing each other before he had slammed out of the house. What had been in his eyes? What had been in hers?

She had been awake a long time in the night with that memory; thinking about it all day hadn't been enough. But she felt quieter now, more detached, so that she could look around the quarrel instead of just going through it over and over. All her emotions these past months seemed to focus themselves into a central conflict—she had given Philip all she had; and he had not, in turn, given her all he had. She had wished to take back her gifts, she had wished to belong to herself again, and she could not. She loved him because she could not help it; and because she could not help loving him, there was this strange underlying hatred, this outraged pride.

And some of this same bitterness had entered into her feeling for Mary. She had imagined to herself that Mary was hers, that she would be the mother of Mary that Sheila had not wanted to be; and Sheila's coming had stripped that illusion from her, too.

But that didn't matter now, she thought. She had never been jealous of Philip's affection for Mary; her feeling was really a transference to Mary of her jealousy of Sheila, and a refusal to admit to herself how much she had lost, or rather, how much she had never had.

She had accused Philip of wanting her only to make a home for him and Mary, and perhaps in a way that was true; but did he mean so little by that? She knew he didn't. His protest against her refusal to accept responsibility for Mary was surely the last thing that should have angered her, because it showed how much he did want.

But of course it wasn't anything he had said. It was funny how things you thought successfully pressed would come suddenly to the surface in a moment when you were caught off guard, and all your determination to be reasonable, all your efforts at self-control, went up in smoke.

She had been all over it in the long hours before she had fallen into a restless, tormented sleep. Philip had come home at the usual time. They had said little to each other, encouraging Mary to talk instead. After dinner Philip played cards with Mary until bedtime. When Anne came back downstairs, Philip was deep in the paper and did not even look up. She wanted to say something, but she could not say she hadn't meant it. And what was there for him to say? They could keep on ignoring it, and sooner or later they would have another quarrel. . . .

Her mind stopped there. It couldn't be like that. Their marriage couldn't degenerate into such a thing. She'd rather break it off now. . . . She'd rather. . . . Philip's face on the pillow was emerging more clearly in the morning light. Watching it, Anne knew she could never leave him. Whatever his reasons had been for wanting to leave her, he HAD wanted to. They HAD been happy. Surely they could again.

The light was beginning to bother her and she turned over. If he had wanted to go back to Sheila, she would have given him up, but she knew he didn't; she knew that whatever hold Sheila had on him, he wanted to break. Anne closed her eyes. If this was her own fault, or at least hers as much as anybody's, then maybe. . . . She fell again into a light, restless sleep.

Philip awakened some time later to the dreary realization that it was Sunday. He looked over at Anne's bed and saw that it was empty. She was down getting breakfast, of course, and Mary would be up, and they would continue the pretense that nothing had happened—and the pretense would gradually become easier, he would gradually become used to it. The trouble was, women liked to dramatize such things, to extract the full flavor of unpleasantness. That wasn't fair, of course. But he didn't feel like being fair. He felt as though he were trapped, and the fact that he had sprung the thing himself didn't help. He heard the telephone and rolled over on his elbow to answer it. Maybe it was an emergency call; he hoped so.

But it was the wrong number. . . . "Awfully sorry." Well, they ought to be, dialing the wrong number at this hour on Sunday morning. He looked at his watch; it was nine o'clock.

Anne was reading Mary the funnies when he walked into the kitchen half an hour later. She glanced up with a brief smile and went on reading. Philip sat down at the table and put some bread in the toaster. He drank his orange juice and looked at the front page of the paper while he waited, but he could not concentrate very well. Anne's voice ceased suddenly.

"Here are the rest," Mary's voice said. "You get Philip to read them to you after breakfast."

"Will you, Philip?"

"Sure."

Mary slipped down and went out into the back yard where they heard her calling Mickey. The toast popped up and Philip buttered it while Anne poured his coffee and refilled her own cup.

"Telephone wake you?"

"No. I was awake. Wrong number."

"Maddening. Have you any appointments today?"

AND SPEAKING OF TELEPHONE BILLS

Don't forget that not all of your monthly remittance is retained by the telephone company. A portion of your total bill, as you know, goes to the Federal government in the form of excise taxes.

The tax on local service rentals and on all toll messages under 25 cents is 15 percent. On toll messages of 25 cents and over, the tax is 25 percent. For example: If your local bill for monthly service is $3.45, forty-five cents of that amount is tax. If you have a toll bill for the month of $5.00, one dollar of that is tax. We merely collect the tax and pass it on to the government.

Taxes represent a substantial portion of all telephone bills. It is hoped that the excise tax on telephone service will soon be reduced or abolished.

SCIOTO CHAPEL LADIES SOCIETY MEETING HELD

Thirty-one members and guests were present, when the Scioto chapel ladies aid society met at the parish house for the January session. The meeting opened with group singing, "Blessed Assurance". Mrs. Richard Hudson, president, conducted the devotions and the Rev. O. W. Smith offered a prayer. Mrs. Ben Walker, secretary, gave her report, and conducted the roll call. Mrs. Thomas Wardell, Jr., gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. William Fortner, was in charge of the program, which opened with the group singing, "Onward Christian Soldiers". Mrs. Harold Wilson and Mrs. Charles Mumaw Jr., in a vocal duet, presented "Help Somebody Today". Contests were held by the society, which were won by Mrs. Howard Younkun and Mrs. Harold Fee.

The meeting came to a conclusion as the members sang, "Where We'll Never Grow Old", and a short prayer by the Rev. Mr. Smith.

Refreshments were served during the social hour by Mrs. Glenn Fausnaugh, Mrs. I. A. Fausnaugh, Mrs. William Fortner and Mrs. Adie Davis. Hostesses for the February meeting will be, Mrs. Thomas Wardell, Jr., Mrs. Leah Dewey, Mrs. Harold Fee, Mrs. Mollie Rodgers and the Rev. Mr. Smith.

... AND SPEAKING OF TELEPHONE BILLS ...

Don't forget that not all of your monthly remittance is retained by the telephone company. A portion of your total bill, as you know, goes to the Federal government in the form of excise taxes.

The tax on local service rentals and on all toll messages under 25 cents is 15 percent. On toll messages of 25 cents and over, the tax is 25 percent. For example: If your local bill for monthly service is $3.45, forty-five cents of that amount is tax. If you have a toll bill for the month of $5.00, one dollar of that is tax. We merely collect the tax and pass it on to the government.

Taxes represent a substantial portion of all telephone bills. It is hoped that the excise tax on telephone service will soon be reduced or abolished.

WILLIAMSPORT, Ashville, New Holland

SALT CREEK WIN Keep Lead; Darby Wins; Pickaway Drubs Walnut

Kingston And Laurelville Are Victims Of Pickaway Teams On Road

Williamsport and Salt Creek, not scheduled for Pickaway county league play, scored victories Friday night while Pickaway, Darby and Perry improved their standings.

New Holland handed Monroe a 42-25 defeat; Ashville downed Scioto 37-21; Pickaway trounced Walnut 58-29; Perry drubbed Jackson 69-27; Darby edged Washington 31-30.

At Monroe Kirwin Durlinger scored 14 points to lead New Holland. Jack Doyle scored 12 and Jim McCown 10. Kenneth Reid had 10 points for Monroe.

The Monroe team led the first quarter 5-4, but New Holland was out in front 19-10 at the half and 34-17 at the end of the third quarter.

New Holland reserves also won, downing Monroe 32-20. Dennis had 14 for the winners and Powers 10 for Monroe.

Coach J. T. Bibby made a good start at Darby, winning a thriller from Washington. Bibby, a native of Portsmouth, started teaching at Darby Monday. Myers and Rogers set the scoring pace with 10 and 9 points. Scott and Kraft had 10 points each for the losers. The score was close all the way.

Washington reserves won another thriller, taking the preliminary by a 16-14 score.

Pickaway led Walnut 12-8 the first period, then took a 23-10 halftime advantage and led 37-23 at the end of the third quarter. Russell Ogan was high man with 18 points for Pickaway. Brinker scored 7 and Pontius 6 for Walnut.

Fireworks of the evening came in the preliminary, which Walnut won 22-21. Walnut led 21-8 at the half and Pickaway fans screamed themselves hoarse as their favorites held the visitors to one point while almost tying up the score. Timmons had 16 points for Pickaway and Stir 7 for Walnut.

High scorer of the evening was Joe Drake, Atlanta, who counted 36 points on 14 baskets and eight foul shots. Perry led Jackson 11-7 the first period, 29-16 at the half and 51-22 at the end of three quarters.

Perry reserves won 24-16. Picklesimer had 7 for the winners and Eitel 6 for Jackson.

Ashville led 8-4 the first period, 22-9 at the half and 26-15 at the end of the third period. Don Thomas was high man for Ashville with 12 points while E. Fannin's 8 points topped Scioto scoring.

Scioto reserves won the preliminary, downing Ashville reserves 21-15. Painter had 7 for Scioto and Neff 6 for Ashville.

Washington reserves won another thriller, taking the preliminary by a 16-14 score.

FISHING RULES WILL CONTINUE SAME IN 1947

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 11.—Fishing regulations in 1947 will be the same as prevailed last year.

The conservation commission today officially approved the draft of the regulations, which make no change in legal lengths, bag limits or seasons.

The northern and southern zones on black bass seasons, regulations on trout line fishing and the taking of bait also remain unchanged.

The commission favored keeping all restrictions at a minimum to eliminate confusion. To facilitate the simplification, the commission voted to abolish all "no fishing" safety zones in the state's 12,000 miles of streams as well as the fishing sanctuaries in all lakes except where lease arrangements are in force.

JANIRO MOVES UP

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—Tony Janiro, flashy 18-year-old welterweight from Youngstown, O., is in line today for a bout with Beau Jack, former lightweight champion, on Feb. 21, as a result of his victory over Tony Pellone of New York in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Mr. Truman did not say how he felt about this although he wanted mere conciliation. Senator Taft thought his omission was promising and held hope he would sign a reform bill this year. No solid ground for such hopes, however, exists. The case bill failed of two-thirds majority by only a few votes, and my best information and belief suggests Mr. Truman will again find reasons to veto a somewhat stronger bill this Spring and that congress will pass it over a veto.

This ultimate outcome is certainly a clear prospect at this early writing. Therefore the handholding and cooperating at the outset seemed actually to represent only a Democratic attempt to muscle in cooperatively on the Republican program now that the election turned overwhelmingly that way. It represents what the Democratic administration if not the unions would take now, since their election defeat, or rather what they would be glad to escape with, if they could. The offer is unreal for more reasons than can be mentioned in a short column, among them these—the Republicans have the votes to act; they have a "mandate" from the public to grant protection; the administration program would only delay action indefinitely longer; it does not touch vital pending issues such as the portal-to-portal pay suits, the Murray-CIO demand for another wage increase, the coming steel difficulties, a union offer to work cooperatively, the closed shop, nationally vertical unionism, tax-free union accumulations of wealth, etc.

In effect then, the handholding represents only a vague offer of compromise after electoral defeat—an offer which will not be accepted, indeed, will not be considered under the very nature of the situation. The outlook is for a short romance.

Incidentally, the best strike deterrent action seems already to have been taken in the election of a Republican congress. Wildly flowing strike talk and action has settled down stupendously since a year ago. The union leaders realize they cannot get away with as much as they used to.

Opinions expressed by the writer in the column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald.

TIGERS SCALP BY INDIANS

SCO LOOP GAME

CHS Varsity Loses 58-4 Tilt At Hillsboro; Reserves Drubbed

Circleville high school cagers took a couple of defeats Friday night at Hillsboro. The varsity, bowled 58-41 and the reserves were trounced 53-22.

Height of two players and speed of Gene Dixon proved too much for the CHS varsity in the South Central Ohio league game. Bob McCoy fouled out in the final period and Dixon got five baskets in the quarter. He was high man for the evening with 20 points. Tall Bill Humphries and Bill Jenike had 15 each. Paul Smallwood counted 17 for Circleville.

Hillsboro led 13-9 the first period, 17-15 at the half and 32-28 at the end of the third quarter. Then the Indians walked away.

Inability to hit from the foul line hurt the Tigers. They made only 3 of 18 chances good while Hillsboro got 14 points by foul shots in 24 tries. There were 13 personal fouls called on Hillsboro and 18 on Circleville.

J. L. Davis scored 29 points for the Hillsboro reserves who led all the way against the Little Tigers. The home team was out in front 13-6 at the first rest, 33-11 at the half and 45-16 at three-quarter mark. The defeat was the Junior Tigers first in five league games.

Next week the Tigers have two road games scheduled, playing Tuesday at Liberty Union and Friday at Grove City.

FISHING RULES WILL CONTINUE SAME IN 1947

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 11.—Fishing regulations in 1947 will be the same as prevailed last year.

The conservation commission today officially approved the draft of the regulations, which make no change in legal lengths, bag limits or seasons.

The northern and southern zones on black bass seasons, regulations on trout line fishing and the taking of bait also remain unchanged.

The commission favored keeping all restrictions at a minimum to eliminate confusion. To facilitate the simplification, the commission voted to abolish all "no fishing" safety zones in the state's 12,000 miles of streams as well as the fishing sanctuaries in all lakes except where lease arrangements are in force.

JANIRO MOVES UP

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—Tony Janiro, flashy 18-year-old welterweight from Youngstown, O., is in line today for a bout with Beau Jack, former lightweight champion, on Feb. 21, as a result of his victory over Tony Pellone of New York in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

Mr. Truman did not say how he felt about this although he wanted mere conciliation. Senator Taft thought his omission was promising and held hope he would sign a reform bill this year. No solid ground for such hopes, however, exists. The case bill failed of two-thirds majority by only a few votes, and my best information and belief suggests Mr. Truman will again find reasons to veto a somewhat stronger bill this Spring and that congress will pass it over a veto.

This ultimate outcome is certainly a clear prospect at this early writing. Therefore the handholding and cooperating at the outset seemed actually to represent only a Democratic attempt to muscle in cooperatively on the Republican program now that the election turned overwhelmingly that way. It represents what the Democratic administration if not the unions would take now, since their election defeat, or rather what they would be glad to escape with, if they could. The offer is unreal for more reasons than can be mentioned in a short column, among them these—the Republicans have the votes to act; they have a "mandate" from the public to grant protection; the administration program would only delay action indefinitely longer; it does not touch vital pending issues such as the portal-to-portal pay suits, the Murray-CIO demand for another wage increase, the coming steel difficulties, a union offer to work cooperatively, the closed shop, nationally vertical unionism, tax-free union accumulations of wealth, etc.

In effect then, the handholding represents only a vague offer of compromise after electoral defeat—an offer which will not be accepted, indeed, will not be considered under the very nature of the situation. The outlook is for a short romance.

Incidentally, the best strike deterrent action seems already to have been taken in the election of a Republican congress. Wildly flowing strike talk and action has settled down stupendously since a year ago. The union leaders realize they cannot get away with as much as they used to.

Opinions expressed by the writer in the column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald.

JACK BENNY SHOW

The Jack Benny program Sunday, (7 P.M. EST over NBC), will feature George Burns and Gracie Allen as guest stars. The zany Gracie, author of the famous bon mot, "The first thing I notice about a man is whether George is around," will play the role of a seductive siren, with Jack as the subject of her feminine wiles. The touped Casanova, however, will play hard-to-get, as usual, since he feels that a man of his charm and accomplishments should never be an easy victim in the battle of the sexes. The masculine half of the Burns and Allen team will retain his usual composure in the face of Gracie's mad antics.

FRED ALLEN SHOW

A satire on the type of show immortalized by the old-time London music halls will be presented by Fred Allen and his guest of honor, Gracie Fields, famous British musical comedy star, on Sunday, at 8:30 P. M. (EST) over NBC. Portland Hoffa will be there to assist him, together with Alley regulars "Sensational Claghorn" (Kennedy Delmar), "Mrs. Nussbaum" (Minerva Pious), "Titus Moody" (Parker Fennelly) and "Ajax Cassidy" (Peter Donald).

CHARLIE MCCARTHY

Edward Arnold, who plays bankers and Wall Street tycoons on the screen and Charlie McCarthy, who would like to know how to become one, will get together Sunday, at 8 P.M. (EST) over NBC. Edgar Bergen, Mortimer Snerd, Pat Patrick ("Ersel Twining"), Anita Gordon and Ray Noble and his orchestra will join Charlie in greeting Arnold, the guest of the evening.

THE BUMSTEDS

Dagwood finds thirty-seven $2 bills in a trash can while walking to the office with Mr. Dithers, during the "Blondie" comedy broadcast, Sunday, at 7:30 p. m. J. C. tries to talk Dagwood into splitting the cash with him, but Blondie puts an ad in the paper to try to find the owner. They get lots of calls, but it turns out

Today's Horoscope

You are a kind person and a winsome, but secretive. Once you become a friend it is for all time but in your fidelity, you are apt to overlook serious faults in these friendships. You will find success in business, politics or teaching. You will make a happy and congenial marriage. This day is good for advancing important interests and for selling.

Hints on Etiquette

A hostess rises to receive all introductions and to greet all her guests as they come. She offers her hand to both men and women.

Horoscope for Sunday

Your originality in everything you do will, if cultivated, bring you happiness and remuneration. Your children will be mechanically inclined and artistic. You are naturally robust and strong, and if you take care of yours... if you will never have any serious illness. This date is good in connection with past, distant and old matters. It is also favorable where romance, marriage and plans are concerned. Worthwhile progress should be made.

One-Minute Test Answers

that the money belongs to Mrs. Buff-Orpington, who declines to take it back!

EXPLORING UNKNOWN

"Is Your Child Normal?" the story of a mother's exaggerated devotion to her small son and its resulting complications, will be described on "Exploring the Unknown," science drama series, Sunday, at 9 p. m. The play will reveal how conflicts and hostilities are set up between family members, and between the child and his environment, when parents fail to bestow affection and attention equally to their progeny.

HARVEST OF STARS

In a program feting the frosty glories of winter, James Melton will have soprano Laura Castellano of Rochester, N. Y. as guest star, together with a gay dramatic story on "Harvest of Stars", Sunday, at 2:30 PM, EST, over NBC.

JACK BENNY SHOW

The Jack Benny program Sunday, (7 P.M. EST over NBC), will feature George Burns and Gracie Allen as guest stars. The zany Gracie, author of the famous bon mot, "The first thing I notice about a man is whether George is around," will play the role of a seductive siren, with Jack as the subject of her feminine wiles. The tooped Casanova, however, will play hard-to-get as usual, since he feels that a man of his charm and accomplishments should never be an easy victim in the battle of the sexes. The masculine half of the Burns and Allen team will retain his usual composure in the face of Gracie's mad antics.

CHARLIE MCCARTHY

Edward Arnold, who plays bankers and Lord Street tycoons on the screen and Charlie McCarthy, who would like to know how to become one, will get together Sunday, at 8 P.M. (EST) over NBC.
